

LETTERS

Gilmour is great

I saw in the last issue of Motorsport News that you suggested that Elfyn Evans, Robert Barrable and David Bogie should have been given VW WRC test drives in front of Emma Gilmour (MN, August 31).

Concerning Craig Breen, I agree with you in that he had deserved a VW WRC drive, as he is the only young driver on your Islands that is good enough.

Emma Gilmour is the fastest female rally driver in the world since Michèle Mouton. She has international experience and good results from the Asian Pacific Championship, and was second quickest to Hayden Paddon in New Zealand for the last couple of years. Paddon is outstanding in the PWRC this year, even winning in Finland.

She also has WRC experience from Germany, Finland and Rally GB in a Fiesta ST a few years ago.

Kris Nissen and Carlos Sainz have taken the right decision concerning Emma Gilmour.

John Haugland

Via email